DID YOU KNOW?

The TSA National Explosives Detection Canine Program trains and deploys both TSA-led and state and local law enforcement led canine teams in support of day-to-day activities that protect the transportation domain. These highly trained explosives detection canine teams are a reliable resource for detecting explosives and provide a visible deterrent to terrorism directed towards transportation systems. TSA trains canine teams to operate in the aviation, multimodal, maritime, mass transit and cargo environments. Considered the “center for excellence” for explosives detection canine training, the program is the largest explosives detection canine program in the Department of Homeland Security and the second largest in the federal government after the Department of Defense.
